DR. ARNOLD FRANK A SUICIDE

SHOT HIMSELF FATALLY IN A HOBOKEN HOTEL.

Had a Stock Farm in Eentucky and Used to Buy Horses Here for the German Government A Man of Many Languages Who Had Travelled the World.

Dr. Arnold Frank, a veterinarian, who is said to have dealt extensively in horses in his day, yesterday shot himself at Fischer's Hotel, 41-43 First street, Hoboken, where for twenty years he had been a guest whenever his business called him to that city. He was found shortly before 8 o'clock in the morning sitting unconscious on a chair in a bathroom with a revolver lying beside him on the floor. The bullet had entered his right temple, passing through the head and embedding itself in the wall. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital by Policemen Dennis Leahy and John Garrick and died fifteen minutes after his admission.

Frank was a distinguished looking man Now Thought That Men Who Held Up Payover six feet tall and weighed about 240 He spoke seven or eight languages and made friends easily with the hotel guests, many of whom Peter Planert, the proprietor, said, he had entertained with stories of his trips all over other countries abroad.
